NEW PARTNERS APPOINTED TO MHM FOLLOWING MERGER

David Inglis, Geoff Inglis and Gary Matheson have been appointed as partners of business advisory and consulting firm mhm.

Their appointment follows the merger of chartered accounting firm Inglis Rowe with mhm, which creates one of Adelaide's most experienced and progressive management consulting, corporate finance and accounting firms.

Chartered accountants David Inglis and Geoff Inglis join mhm having been partners and directors at Inglis Rowe for approximately 20 years.

Gary Matheson was made a partner at Inglis Rowe in 2000 having built a career within the public and private sector.

mhm Managing Partner and CEO John Hood said the three new partners each had outstanding expertise and experience.

"A successful merger is all about creating the right team," Mr Hood said.

"The partners and staff of mhm and Inglis Rowe share similar values, culture and commitment to professionalism and client service. The merged team further enhances mhm's capacity to provide our broad range of tailored professional services to our clients."
